

Case Study - XPO Networks

If you have ever used as free internet access point in a European airport, the chances are you would have used an XPO product.

Their distinctive green towers with free hotmail and access to a wide range of information services have become a familiar sight in recent years. There are regularly people queuing to make use of them.

We spent 3 days at Heathrow shooting the units individually and in their environment. Shots were supplied both as cutouts and as retouched 'artistic' works that XPO have successfully used in their brochures and on their website.

We carry the full £5million insurance that BAA demand and use the battery lighting that enables successful operation in the power-free environment of the terminals..
